to be evasive.

SENATOR BROMM: No.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And I could state "yes" or "no", one way or the other.

SENATOR BROMM: I think you gave me the exact right answer, no one knows for sure until the fact question is decided by the jury or by the judge, as the case may be.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR BROMM: And the point I want to make, and to me it is an important point, the language and the words that we're dealing with here today are extremely artfully drawn, they have meaning that has been established by precedent and case law. And we need to be extremely careful about changing these words, what would appear on first glance to be perfectly harmless or not really having any great effect on the application of the law could very well be something that a case turns on five years from now, or might create another argument. And we know how many appeals it.... I mean there's always appeals, there automatically are appeals when the death penalty is involved. So we just must be very careful and sort through this. I don't know on this amendment what.... I understand Senator Chambers' example, that's...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Time.

SENATOR BROMM: ...an extreme example. I'm not sure I support this amendment yet. Thank you.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator. Senator Bruning would like to announce that there are guests visiting the Legislature today. Fran Kruse from Grand Island, and Georgia Snyder from Las Vegas, are here under the south balcony. Will you both stand and be recognized, please. Welcome to the Legislature. Senator Chambers, your light is next, followed by Senators Matzke and Will.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Madam President, members of the Legislature,
